

What Went Down In AI Town This Week

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

Swipe >

1

Anthropic walked away from a Pentagon AI contract over safety and usage restrictions, triggering a public dispute, a government backlash, and an ongoing lawsuit.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

2

People are using AI agents like OpenClaw to automate dating, from finding matches to messaging, sparking debate over authenticity, ethics, and privacy.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

3

Anthropic launched Claude Science and signaled plans to explore AI-driven drug discovery for neglected diseases, while experts stress that clinical testing remains essential.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

4

Google's new Declaration of Independence ad reimagines the Founding Fathers using Workspace and Gemini, drawing mixed reactions over its humorous take on AI in history.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

5

Samsung expects record profits driven by soaring AI memory chip demand, highlighting how the AI boom continues to fuel the global semiconductor industry.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

6

AI-generated actor Tilly Norwood will star in Misaligned, reigniting debate over AI's role in filmmaking and its impact on human actors.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

7

Anthropic is expanding Claude Cowork to mobile and web, enabling cloud-based AI workflows that continue seamlessly across devices.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

8

Meta launched Muse Image, a free AI image generator with powerful editing features, but its ability to use public Instagram photos has sparked fresh privacy concerns.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

9

Google Photos is rolling out Gemini-powered Video Remix, allowing eligible AI subscribers to transform videos with AI-powered lighting, backgrounds, and artistic effects in seconds.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

10

OpenAI is preparing to launch GPT-5.6 after additional security reviews, reflecting growing government scrutiny of advanced AI over cybersecurity and national security risks.

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

If you want to

Get AI And Tech Insights

Join for free 🖱️

mindstream.news

Mindstream

Follow for more AI and tech insights

